

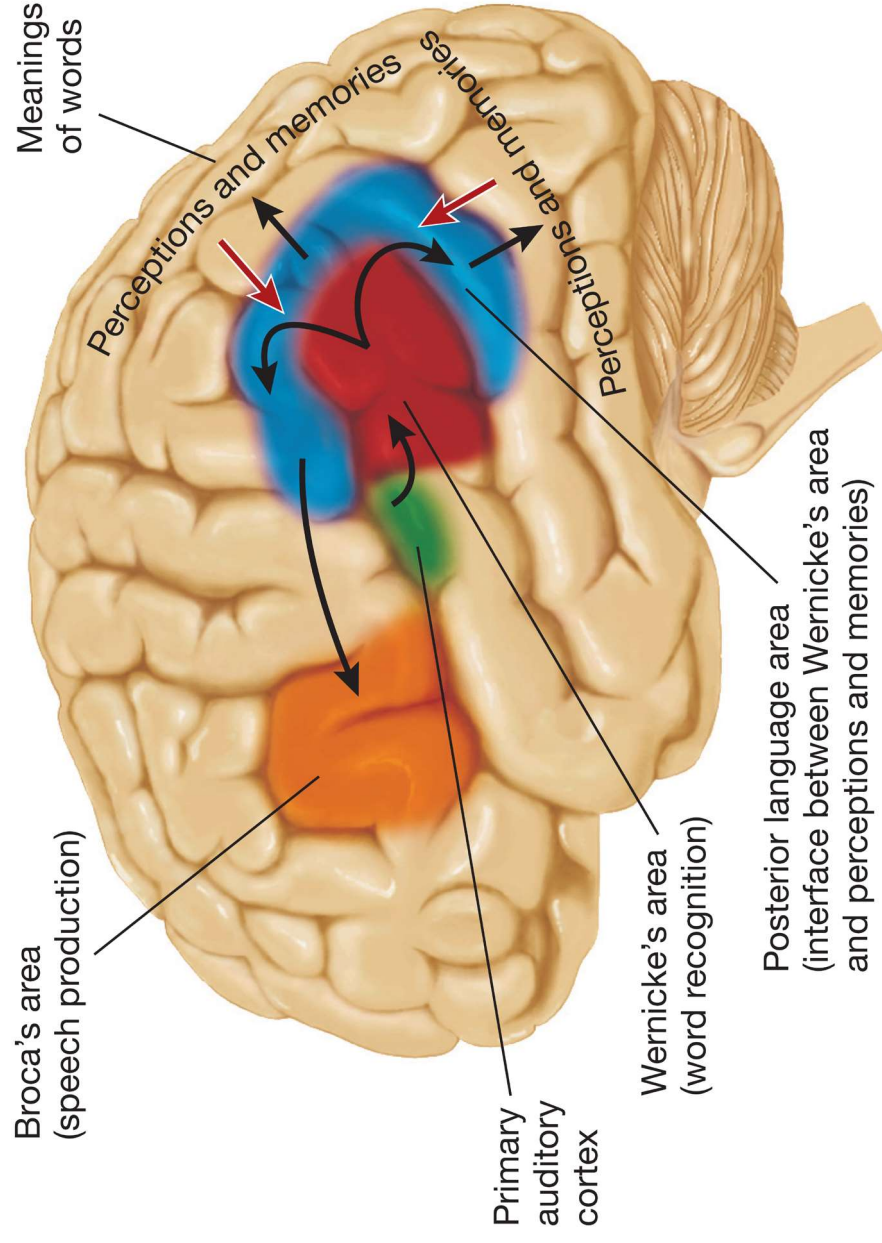

Figure 14.2

The Dictionary in the Brain

Wernicke's area contains the auditory entry of words; the meanings are contained as memories in the sensory association areas. Black arrows represent comprehension of words—that is, the activation of memories that correspond to a word's meaning. Red arrows represent translation of thoughts or perceptions into words.